Hello,

Social Skills class is back in full swing for 2018! Last week we learned about being resilient and rising above difficult circumstances in life. We talked about getting through tough times and helping others be resilient too. We also did role play and a plate spinning activity as a group.

Today we explored how to maintain our personal space. We discovered that everyone had their own "bubble" and that it was okay to tell someone to "respect our personal space and back away". People should always ask before they hug someone. Most importantly, we are all in charge of our own personal space. Also, when we interrupt a conversation, it is a violation of our personal space. If a person needs to interrupt, it should be very important, and they should say excuse me. It is important to respect each other's personal space.

Your children are amazing!

Thank you,

Ms. Julie
